Winter 2025 Course Descriptions

Writing Through Imagery #1084 – This class will use a diverse array of images to spark and nurture individual creativity in writing. Students will have opportunities to work independently and in groups, sharing their stories and ideas with the class. Through this collaborative environment, students will be encouraged to explore their unique voices and perspectives to help improve their writing skills.

History of US Presidents #1179 – In this class, students will learn about the history and legacies of American Presidents from different generations and discuss key campaigns that have shaped our nation. Through research and discussion, we will review the responsibilities of our highest elected officials and their spouses by examining their administrative policies, failures, and accomplishments. This comprehensive approach will offer a well-rounded understanding of both their professional and personal contributions to the nation's development.

Celebrations around the World #1113 – From the dazzling festivals of India to the vibrant Day of the Dead, Mardi Gras, and Rio's Carnival, this course will introduce us to the diverse celebrations practiced by cultures around the world. Students will investigate both renowned and obscure holidays and events, exploring how different societies shape their traditions. Through in-depth research and discussion, students will gain a profound understanding of global cultural practice.

Myth Busters #1173 – Is yawning contagious? Does breakfast cereal really contain iron? In this course, students will have the opportunity to explore the answers to these and many other intriguing questions. We will dive into common curiosities, sparking students' interest and fostering a deeper understanding of the world around them. We will investigate where these myths originate and whether there is a kernel of truth behind these theories.
